Breathe Me Back to Center

Return to calm · Teens & adults

Verse 1

There's a tremor in my shoulders,
There's a buzzing in my chest,
When the world begins to scatter
And the noise won't let me rest.
But I've learned the quiet language
Of returning to my ground,
In the rhythm of my breathing
Where my center can be found.

Chorus

Breathe me back to center,
Breathe me into still.
Let the storm clouds in my ribcage
Find a sky they can't help fill.
Let my feet remember safety,
Let my heartbeat slow its climb—
In the cradle of my body
I can re-enter in my time.

Verse 2

There is wisdom in the shaking,
There is power in the pause,
Every tremble is a teacher,
Every exhale knows the cause.
When the ground is gently waiting
For my spirit to return,
I remember: regulation
Is a practice that I learn.

Chorus

Breathe me back to center,
Breathe me into still.
Let the storm clouds in my ribcage
Find a sky they can't help fill.
Let my feet remember safety,
Let my heartbeat slow its climb—
In the cradle of my body
I can re-enter in my time.

Bridge

With every breath, I unravel
The chaos that resides,
Inhale the calm, exhale the battle,
Trust in this gentle ride.
I'll take it slow, let me follow,
The whispers of my soul,
As I navigate this feeling,
And reclaim what makes me whole.

Verse 3

So when the tremors start to quake me,
And the world feels far away,
I will find my steady heartbeat
In the stillness of the day.
When the longing pushes forward,
And the clock begins to spin,
I'll breathe me back to center,
And let my journey begin.

Chorus

Breathe me back to center,
Breathe me into still.
Let the storm clouds in my ribcage
Find a sky they can't help fill.
Let my feet remember safety,
Let my heartbeat slow its climb—
In the cradle of my body
I can re-enter in my time.

Outro

With every little moment,
I'll embrace what life bestows,
Through the tremors and the winter,
In my center, love still grows.
